Do I need a separate locker room?

The flow/layout depends on the space and the client, but elbow room is key. Separate men's and women's locker rooms are not a necessity but help avoid overcrowding the common areas and maintain the appearance of the front of house. 3. What kind of permits should I look into? Do I need them?

Do I need a permit to install a locker?

No permits are required if simply part of a furniture installation. If installing lockers requires walls and electrical to be removed/relocated, then we would recommend a general construction permit.

Should a locker room have a shower or a water closet?

This depends very much on the specific culture of a space and its clientele. The ideal from a design aspect is the traditional large locker rooms containing both showers and water closets, but we recognize that those configurations take up a much larger footprint than breaking up the different parts.

What makes a perfect locker layout?

The key to a perfect layout is to achieve a balance of comfort and usability whilst optimising your available space. So, the first requirement is to establish the number of users and available space allocated for the lockers.

How much space do you need for a locker?

But if your lockers are just for staff to store their belongings during their shift, 1.2m should be enough space for lockers that are face-to-face. Once you have decided on how best to use the space available to you, it is then necessary to establish what size of locker compartment would be suitable.
